New Training Opportunity!

Professionals working within Health and Social Care in Scotland can access our FREE 'Fundamentals of FASD for Health and Social Care Practitioners' online training scheduled to take place on a regular basis throughout the year. You can access details and register by following our Eventbrite page <https://FAASTTeam.eventbrite.com>

FAASTT has partnered with the University of Edinburgh and is delighted to be able to offer Europe's first Postgraduate Certificate in FASD. This is comprised of 3 individual 10-week modules:

- Understanding FASD: Context, Contributors and Clinical Presentation
- The Assessment and Diagnosis of FASD
- Advanced Practice in FASD

Each module can be taken with academic credit for the PgCert, or as a standalone module for CPD. All modules are designed to work around busy professionals, being part time and online.

NES: Foetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder

This learning has been developed by colleagues in Improving Health and Wellbeing who are keen to convey this information to stakeholders. The learning is free to access.

It is not known how many children, young people and adults are affected by this developmental disorder; many are identified when in the care of adoptive parents. It is likely that there are many looked after and care experienced children and young people who may be living with FASD without either them or their carers and family knowing. There are likely also to be many people affected by FASD who are or were not care experienced and who require help and support.

To enable practitioners to understand more about FASD, The Scottish Government in partnership with experts in FASD has created an e-learning module which is available on the NHS Education for Scotland TURAS platform:

- Understanding FASD
 - Preventing FASD
 - Identifying FASD
 - Interventions and Support for FASD

Understanding FASD offers a broad overview for practitioners and lays the foundations for understanding why preventing FASD and knowledge of the Chief Medical Officer's "No Alcohol No Risk" in pregnancy message is so important. It also outlines why early identification and intervention and support is essential to fostering positive outcomes for individuals with FASD.

This learning resource outlines why, without identification and support, affected individuals often struggle to attain and acquire life skills for independent living. Those affected but unsupported have a high degree of need for mental health, addiction and criminal justice services.

You will need to register with Turas to access the resource

Motivational Interviewing in Brief Conversations

Helping professionals are often required to venture into discussions with people about making changes to their lifestyle or behaviours. Have you ever wondered why and exactly how conversations inspire change and what the skills involved are?

At SDF we have drawn upon the body of research evidence, extracting concepts and approaches within the communication style called Motivational Interviewing (MI).

This course is designed to offer a 'taste' of motivational interviewing. It is not designed to be a complete training course in MI, but rather a first step for those who are interested in learning more about this style of communication. It incorporates the latest methods from the new 3rd edition of Motivational Interviewing by W.R. Miller and S. Rollnick.

By the end of this course participants will be able to:

- Describe the nature of ambivalence about change.
- Define motivational interviewing.
- Describe how the motivational interviewing process influences motivation for change.
- Identify the use of motivational interviewing in brief conversations.

Other Online Learning

A variety of online learning is available. The list outlined below is not exclusive. The ADP would be pleased to hear about other courses that are available to add to this list. We would recommend using latest versions of your web browser.

NES: Trauma Informed

This training consists of two workshops to help individuals and teams examine how they work through a trauma informed lens. There are five key pause points for reflection, discussion, planning and commitment. Whether watched as an individual or as a team, it will help you to reflect on:

- The extent to which the people you work with may have experience trauma, and the impact that might have on your work.
- Recognizing and celebrating your existing trauma informed practices and how to sustain these.
- Identifying, and making an active commitment to the small changes you can make to help you recognize where someone may be affected by trauma, and respond in a way that limits re-traumatisation and supports their recovery using the principles of trauma informed practice.

Who is this resource for?

All members of the workforce, whether paid or unpaid.

Provider: NHS Learnpro

Available at: <https://www.nes.scot.nhs.uk/>

NES: Trauma Skilled

This training is comprised of 4 modules:

Developing your trauma skilled practice 1: Understanding the impact of trauma and responding in a trauma informed way.

Developing your trauma skilled practice 2: Trauma in children and young people.

Developing your trauma skilled practice 3: Understanding the impact of trauma on mental health and evidence-based pathways to recover.

Developing your trauma skilled practice 4: Understanding the use of substances to cope with the impact of trauma.

Who is this resource for?

This resource is for all workers who are likely to come into contact with people who may have been affected by trauma.

At the end of the section you should know how to use these modules to develop your knowledge in working with people with trauma

Provider: NHS Scotland

Motivational Interviewing Coach Assessment

This course consists of three modules. The first module provides an overview of the Spirit and person-centred counselling skills that underpin Motivational Interviewing. These elements represent the relational aspects of MI. The second module explores the strategic or technical elements of Motivational Interviewing as defined by the third edition of Motivational Interviewing published in October 2013 by Miller and Rolnick. For those who were trained in MI before the third edition was printed, this module provides a useful update on the changes that have been introduced to Motivational Interviewing over the years. The third module has been designed to provide taped practice examples of Motivational Interviewing, including the Edinburgh Interview, which illustrates many therapeutic challenges and therapeutic themes found in Scottish service settings.
